We realise that the publication of this issue has been delayed by quite sometime. And we apologise to our readers for this unintended delay in the production process. Now that the issue is finally complete, we are sure you will appreciate the contents. Your comments and suggestions are always valuable to us. Do feel free to share your thoughts and ideas with the editorial team.

This is a Special Issue on 'Everyday in the Global South'. The issues raised and discussed in the pages of the ezine are diverse, in terms of their geographical spread and the area of focus. The articles are a mix of both historical and contemporary studies. The remaining two issues in this year will be general.

We are also pleased to inform you that Sephis is now on Facebook and LinkedIn! You can be a Sephis fan on Facebook and join the Sephis LinkedIn group, and stay informed about our activities, engage in discussion fora, connect with other people in the Sephis network etc.
